We have updated our Privacy Policy to reflect the changes and will continue to ensure that your contact data, which we hold on file, is safe. We never share email addresses with third parties, and will use your address only for the purposes of notifying you of any information you might expect from a yacht design and naval architecture company.

Our database has been compiled over many years through direct contact with customers, suppliers, business colleagues and friends, usually from emails you have sent to us. At no time have we ever acquired a third party data base, nor will we in the future.

There is nothing you need do in response to email in order to remain on our database. You will be given the opportunity to unsubscribe each time we send you an email.
